A+DFF 2015

Now in its 4th year, the Architecture+Design Film Festival (A+DFF) Winnipeg presents critically acclaimed films focusing on the importance of architecture and design in everyday life. The films cover a range of design-oriented topics from architecture, landscape and urban design to graphics and product design. This year the films are from England, Spain, Italy, Netherlands, France, USA and Canada. Primarily documentaries, we are also showing fictional feature and short films, which explore our built environment with great humour.

The festival is unique in Canada and provides an opportunity to see a range of short and feature length films, newly released or in limited release. The 2015 festival will open with the Canadian documentary, Strange and Familiar: Architecture of Fogo Island, which documents the artists' studios and new Fogo Island Inn, designed by architect Todd Saunders. This project has been showcased in more than 80 international magazines for its beautiful design but also innovative community development goals. We are pleased that film-makers Katherine Knight and Marcia Connelly will be present for a post-film discussion.

The 2015 Architecture+Design Film Festival is being generously supported by the Winnipeg Foundation, as well as individual film sponsors. As with all volunteer-run cultural events, financial support is most welcome and necessary.

PROLOGUES

Each of the films will be introduced by individuals who will share some context, either directly or indirectly related to the film. This feature is an evolving tradition at Winnipeg's Architecture+Design Film Festival, and this year we welcome participation from a diverse group of knowledgeable and entertaining experts and enthusiasts.

Strange and Familiar: Architecture of Fogo Island

Katherine Knight and Marcia Connolly
2014, Canada, 55 minutes, English
Prologue by Michael J. Cox, architect, Brandon

The filmmakers, Katherine Knight and Marcia Connelly, will be in attendance.

"Architect Todd Saunders' sculpture-like artist studios perched on the rocky shores of Fogo Island created a buzz among worldwide architecture fans when the first images were released. Since then, the four artists studios and the new Fogo Island Inn have been documented in more than 80 international magazines. The striking buildings are located in an equally dramatic natural setting that is the rugged sub-arctic landscape of Fogo Island, a small, remote rocky outcrop off the coast of Newfoundland, imbuing each structure with the spirit of the 'new' and finding a winning balance between the strange and familiar. Gorgeously photographed over all four seasons the film is a flowing, visual narrative that unfolds over time as the Fogo Island Inn is being constructed. Zita Cobb's belief in the tension of opposites as a positive force in human experience is reflected in the film. The Inn is totally modern yet filled with textures inherited from the past. The idea of moving forward while reaching back is tangible in the juxtaposition of old and new architecture. Extensive interviews with Todd Saunders and Zita Cobb provide intimate insight into the personalities and motivations behind the creation of adventurous contemporary architecture. An extensive cast of local residents provides the real-world context in which the buildings exist. This is a portrait of a little island that wants to be relevant in a big and current way." —sitemedia.ca

Peter Zumthor: The Practice of Architecture

Michael Blackwood
2012, USA, 58 minutes, English
Prologue by Ken Borton, architect, 5468796 architecture

"The architect Peter Zumthor lives and works in the remote village of Haldenstein in the Swiss Kanton of Graubünden. Here, keeping the politics of architecture at a comfortable distance, Zumthor enjoys the status of "world-class" architect for his unique modernist buildings... Visiting him in his studio, where he would be surrounded by drawings and maquettes turned out to be a good idea. Critic Kenneth Frampton questioned him during a tour of his current work and about his pioneering earlier works, such as the Spa in Vals, for which he received much early recognition, and the recent much acclaimed Kolumba, the museum of the archdiocese of Cologne, Germany."

Citizen Lambert: Joan of Architecture

Produced by Amélie Blanchard, Paul Cadieux, Germaine Ying Gee Wong, Dominique Boischot, Sally Bochner, and Ravida Din
2007, Canada, 60 minutes, English

Free, in partnership with the Winnipeg Public Library.

A unique glimpse into the world of Phyllis Lambert, renowned Canadian architect, urban activist, patron and founder of the Canadian Centre for Architecture in Montreal, Citizen Lambert: Joan of Architecture paints a vibrant portrait of a figure so often presented one-dimensionally in the press.

The public story of Phyllis Lambert is told through a prologue loosely conceived as a parody of Citizen Kane's "News on the March." These newsreel-like sequences detail Lambert's many accomplishments—such as commissioning Mies van der Rohe to design the Seagram Building in New York in the 1950s; directing photographic missions from the early 1970s to document historic architecture; her role as an urban guerrilla in the landmark Milton-Parc housing renovation project; founding Heritage Montréal in 1975; and forming the collections which led to her founding the CCA as a research centre and museum. This public Phyllis contrasts sharply with the private Phyllis presented through the montage of footage shot in Lambert's home with director Teri Wehn-Damisch. This is Phyllis Lambert uncensored, in her own words, in her own world. The figure that emerges from Wehn-Damisch's composite portrait is that of a visionary thinker with boundless energy, a feisty woman driven by joyful ambition, a free spirit.

The Nature of Modernism: E. Stewart Williams

Produced by Jake Gorst and Tracey Rennie
2014, USA, 79 minutes, English
Prologue by Joe Kalturkyk,
RAW: Gallery of Architecture & Design

When Frank Sinatra walked into E. Stewart Williams' newly-established architectural office in May 1947, he wanted a Georgian-style house built in the desert of Palm Springs. Williams tactfully convinced him of the benefits of modernism, and Sinatra went for it. The two had no idea how far reaching and influential that decision would prove to be. The house was the first in a string of mid-century modernist gems that still define the look and feel of the Coachella Valley, and which would come to include Crafton Hills College, Palm Springs Desert Museum (now Palm Springs Art Museum), and Santa Fe Federal Savings, now the museum's Architecture and Design Center. Design Onscreen's film by Jake Gorst and Tracey Rennie Gorst makes extensive use of E. Stewart Williams' personal archival photographs and voice recordings to shed new light on a remarkable career.

The Advertising Association of Winnipeg has launched a new research project aimed at creating a digital archive of Ghost Signs in Winnipeg’s Exchange District. The year-long undertaking will focus on cataloguing ghost signs in the area, developing a history of the products and documenting the painters behind the work. This research will be compiled and launched in the spring 2015 as an interactive website at www.ghostsigns.ca.

Ghost signs are hand-painted, outdoor ads that have been preserved on sides of buildings. They are also known as fading ads or brick ads and were prevalent from the 1890s through to the 1960s. As outdoor advertising mediums evolved, ghost signs became a less popular way of advertising products and services and were replaced by billboards and vinyl banners.

The screening will be followed by a free tour of “Ghost Signs” in the Exchange District, led by Matt Cohen, President, Advertising Association of Winnipeg.

Estate, a Reverie

Directed by Andrea Luka Zimmerman

2015, UK, 83 minutes, English

Prologue by Hannah_g, Ace Art

Estate, a Reverie is a poetic documentary film essay that tracks the passing of the massive Haggerston Estate in Hackney, London, and the utopian promise of social housing it offered when it was built in the 1930s. After decades of lack of maintenance, the whole area was condemned. The last building, Samuel House, was the home of the filmmaker until it demolished in the fall of 2014.

Filmed over the final seven years, Estate, a Reverie reveals and celebrates the resilience of marginalized people who live their lives at the mercy of governmental and financial decisions. It also shows how new forms of community took form among the residents as the date for the final move approached, offering valuable insights in social processes in cities. Perhaps it is not just a question of where we live, but how? With music composed and performed by Olivia Chaney.

Mon Oncle

Directed by Jacques Tati

1958, France, 116 minutes, French with English subtitles

Prologue by Lisa Landrum, Professor of Architecture, University of Manitoba

The awkward but elegant Monsieur Hulot visits his sister's family at their quirky modern home and garden, and attempts to take a respectable job at the humourless plastic hose factory owned by his portly bourgeoisie brother in law. Poking fun at gadgetry and the car obsessed modern suburban landscape, while revelling in the charming persistence of the nearby town centre Mon Oncle is an amusing satire of the modern lifestyle of materialist suburbanites. This Academy Award-winning film is as relevant today as it ever was—especially perhaps in Winnipeg where enlightened critiques of suburbia and modernity have yet to fully land and where those who cherish the creative force of anachronism tend to thrive.

The New Rijksmuseum

Directed by Oeke Hoogendijk
2014, Netherlands, 93 minutes, Dutch/Spanish with English subtitles
Prologue by Leona Herzog, independent curator, previously at Manitoba Hydro

In 2003 an optimistic start was made with the renovation of the Rijksmuseum in Amsterdam. The Netherlands major tourist attraction would re-open its doors in fresh splendour in 2008. But alas, right from the start the project was opposed by unyielding counter forces and Rembrandt's palace was slowly transformed into an apparently permanent building site. This unique and prize winning epic documentary was filmed behind the closed doors of the Museum for ten years.

important contemporary architects and artists working today as Toyo Ito, Anish Kapoor, Rem Koolhaas, Daniel Libeskind and Alvaro Siza. He founded the Advanced Geometry Unit (AGU) in 2000, a research based practice, which is comprised of architects, artists, engineers, and scientists, to pursue his interest in the genesis of form using numbers, music, and mathematics as vital sources."
